

Personal Site: for and against

Everybody knows that the Internet is very important in the life of a modern teacher. Everyone has a chance to create his/her personal site. Just try to ask yourself: "What role does a personal site play in your life? Is it a good idea to spend more hours a day surfing the net and being in touch with your students even after school?" These are the questions we should answer. And the most striking thing is that the answer will be different for everyone.

On the one hand, one may think that having a personal site is an excellent opportunity. For example, you can share your ideas with your students and even communicate with their parents when you are at home as they spend much time in the internet. That is why this is a good way to raise motivation of your students and be an up-to-date teacher.

On the other hand, if you have your personal site, you should know that it is a great responsibility and even a burden for you. As a result, you spend much time in the Internet, doing harm to your eyes. Moreover, you should work hard always creating different tasks and new thing for you students.

Actually, you shouldn't think only about difficulties, but also about the results of your work. If you do everything the right way, your students will appreciate you. And this will be the best award for you.

To sum everything up, we should say that a personal site is just a necessity in our life and a real need for teachers. There are many examples of people who have their educational sites. And now the question is still open for you: "Would you like to have your personal site?"
