

Personal sites: for and against.

Nowdays Internet resources develop very fast. People get a chance to use them in different ways and for different goals. It can be blogs, livejournals, personal sites and social nets. It is very convenient using such kinds of internet resources for communication, changing ideas, thoughts, business plans and so on. There is no doubt that personal sites gives people an opportunity to express their personality, to share professional works and their experience. As for me I have not got a personal site yet. But I use my colleagues' personal sites for searching information. It is very helpful. On the other hand,I believe there are some negative facts about personal sites. Some people say that it takes a lot of time and you constantly need to renew information on your site. It is not very convenient when you have not enough time. More than that you must have necessary technical skills for site building. However these "problems" do not stop people who want to be successful in our changeable and competitive world. To sum up we can say we can say that internet gives us many opportunities and it depends on everyone how you can use them. I would like to get my own experience in site building and I hope it will be useful.