Personal site: for and against.

To my mind creating a personal web site is the best opportunity to improve your knowledge and to raise your educational level. On the one hand, a personal web site is designed for the publication of personal information. In contrast to the publication on the public sections, I can create any material and publish it on my own site. I can change, edit it and no one except me can do anything.   What is more, on a personal website, I can create photo galleries, file archives, blogging, and keep track of what's happening in the lives of my friends.

Therefore, the text information on my web site should be useful and understandable to the public. They should be concerned the requirements of new technology that can make effective progress.

For example, I write fiction stories, drawing illustrations for them and want that people have known about my abilities. Through the Internet is more and more easier to find people who will share my interests.   Although there will be many competitors.

On the other hand, it's not a secret that anyone comes to the website for information. I am afraid that some people may copy out my information and publish it as their own.

To sum up, I want to say that personal web site has both advantages and drawbacks. I am sure we should not reject personal site for the bad effect it might has. On the contrary, we must learn how to make the best of it.