

We live in the computer age. Almost everyone today is connected to a large network of computers called the Internet. Many people want a piece of the Internet to call their own. Having a website of your own is no longer a whim but rather a necessity.

There are many reasons why people create their own personal websites. Personal sites are excellent tools to use. Thanks to them people can represent their personal profile. Also having a web site is a great way to share and exchange knowledge with others and to keep a collection of things that inspire you. It is really helpful for teachers as it enables them to be in touch with their students and colleagues at any time.

Still there are some drawbacks. First of all having a website takes a lot of time as the information you post should be updated and reliable. Another problem is data theft. You can never be sure that your "property" is not illegally taken by someone else.

To sum up, I should say that a personal website is now an efficient way to motivate and inspire both students and teachers to work hard and do their best in self-development. Website possibilities are endless. Why not own one?