Nowadays the world changes rapidly and we can`t imagine daily life without Internet. It has become an integral part of our lives. A lot of people use it for different purposes: for communication, studying, searching for information, etc. Almost everybody has her/his personal page in different social nets; moreover, we have an opportunity to have a personal website. Some people think that such resource is very useful and has a lot of advantages. Others are strongly against it. Let`s consider this issue.

Firstly, a personal website presents the author to advantage. Everybody who visits personal websites gets necessary information about   its host. Moreover, the more people surf it, the more popular the host of website becomes.

Secondly, having a personal site helps the person share information and experience, communicate with colleagues from different countries, give and gets advice and be in touch with a lot of visitors of the website.

   On the other hand, there are some disadvantages of this fact. The one of the reasons is payment. It means that if a person has his or her personal website, he or she must pay for the using domen. The next reason is that successful development of your personal website requires much time and effort, certain computer skills. And the main argument against having a personal website is being harmful for people`s health because it is scientifically proved that computers have bad influence on eyesight, backbone, skin.

To sum it up, if a person is highly motivated by existing in such a format of this resource he or she will take it up in spite of all the disadvantages, mentioned above. People who are not obsessed with virtual space usually choose different ways of communication or self-presentation.
