Speaker 1

I can't stand restaurants where they play live music! I f I want live music I ' ll go to a concert: And when I do, I am ready to dance — not fill my face with food. Restaurants are for food and conversation with friends. Why do they do it? How come they don't understand this simple thing? How can they possibly believe those bright “ethnic” costumes, the frantic guitar playing and maddening clapping can in any way improve your meal?

Speaker 2

Helen is a banker. She power dresses, carries a full brief case and works in the city. She is hard working, extremely knowledgeable and has a background in law as well as business. But her greatest passion is preparing, cooking and serving curry for herself and her friends. She chooses and buys all the specialist ingredients. She likes to dress in traditional Indian clothes for her parties and encourages her guests to do the same.

The secret of good cooking is choosing top quality ingredients.

Ideally they should be

absolutely fresh and
when ever possible I buy
organic meat and vegetables. It is not simply

about avoiding the
additives and chemicals
of intensive farming (although this is also important

to me): But it is also
about rediscovering
natural flavours — the
true taste of vegetables

that I

remember from
childhood.

Speaker 4

I eat out most days rather than stay in, at home. It costs a fair amount but just think what I save. I don't need to go to supermarkets to search for over priced single portion meals (I

live

on my own). I don't pay electricity for
hours of cooking or
running a dishwasher.

I don't

actually have any
washing up, clearing up or wasted food. I don't need to prepare
food, plan or

cook so I guess I
actually save 2 hours
a day.

Speaker 5

In my opinion two things are essential in running a successful restaurant. First — reliable food. The menu

doesn't need to be
exotic; just a good
choice of well
cooked meals,
made by

experienced staff.
Over cooked food
or meals served
partly frozen are
the worst
restaurant

“crimes” ! The
second essential
thing is good
service. Poor
waiters result in the
restaurant never

getting regular,
repeat business.

Speaker 6

There are so
many vegetarians
these days and
so many fresh
recipes, exotic
ingredients and

new cooking techniques. This is ignored by many traditional restaurants who offer plenty of

choices to meat
eaters but very
little to us
vegetarians. We
often get limited
to an “expensive

leaf salad”
followed by
cheese and
potato pie. It
really gets rather
tiresome.
