The greatest woman in my life

Hi, mom, I want to see
Your smile, your eyes, your hands.
It's wonderful for me
To get this perfect chance.

Some years ago you gave me life,
You heard a cry from a little child.
My father said, "My cheerful wife,
Our Happiness is so great and wild".

And since those times you've got a choice
To be so patient or to shout.
And, when you heard my noisy voice
In the street, you checked me out.

And I became an older girl,
I understood the major thing:
You are the kindest woman in the world,
You shine my life with a dazzling blink.

You helped so many times,
I so enjoy your every touch,
And when you give me some advice,
I also like it very much.

I've never seen anyone do it better! Your poem is a right example of good writing! Good luck in the contest!
